Grief and loss have quickly emerged as important areas for consideration during the pandemic. Grief and bereavement support and care is a core component of palliative care that will be essential to patients and families who have been directly impacted by the losses related to COVID-19. The need for a range of grief and bereavement supports and services during and following the pandemic is likely to reach unprecedented levels. Many health and social care professionals will be seeking out resources that highlight models or current approaches to this work, or forums that will help them to connect with colleagues who are also working to meet this demand. These individuals may also benefit from access to information, support and other services that help to address the stress and distress they may be experiencing.

This document collates a number of helpful grief and bereavement resources focused on health care professionals. It is divided into two sections:

1. Resources to support providers who are involved in providing grief and bereavement support and services to families.*
2. Resources to support health care professionals/formal care providers with their own coping and well-being

While this list is not exhaustive, it is hoped that it will offer a starting point for accessing readily available resources and practice supports.
